New teachers need to know that in a lot of ways, the first year (or sometimes two) is like a grieving process. You are grieving the death of a person you thought you knew. The self who used to be in control of your surroundings. The self who always had easy, accessible, work-through-able solutions to problems in your life.

Your First Year Teaching Means Grieving Your Former Self

As a concept, domestic violence didn't exist before the 1970s. Until then, it was called wife beating—if it was discussed at all. Second-wave feminism sought to change that. In 1971, Erin ...
